Ch -9 My Silly Sister

FROM THE STORY Oral I think the baby is one year old. Tick (3) the correct answer in each. 1. (c) pebbles 2. (b) She tears its pages. 3. (a) moon Read And Answer 1. The narrator is the brother of the baby he talks about in the story. 2. When the narrator calls out 'Father', the baby girl gets excited and thinks that her father is near. 3. When the narrator shakes his head with anger and scolds her or call her naughty, the baby laughs and thinks it to be great fun. 4. Sometimes the narrator holds a class with the donkeys of his washerman. At that time, the narrator warns her that he is the schoolmaster so she should better not make any noise. Only then, she keeps quiet.

Think And Answer 1. No, the baby does not understand that she has to learn the 'a b c'. She is too young to know about books and the lessons being taught by her brother. 2. She thinks that the pebbles are real food as she tries to put them into her mouth. 3. The narrator says 'your baby' when he is talking to his mother. He says this because the baby is his mother's child. Yes, he can call her in a different way. Since, the baby is his sister also, he can address her as 'my sister'. 4. No, the baby sister is not really silly. She is just really small and innocent. Yes, she makes me smile when she tries to eat the pebbles or laughs when her brother is scolding her.

Reference To Context (a) 'She' is the baby sister of the narrator of the story. (b) 'Them' are the pebbles the narrator gave to his little sister to play with. (c) 'She' puts 'them' in her mouth as she thinks that the pebbles are real food. (d) Yes, I like 'She'. She seems to be cute and her childish acts are funny. She is a baby and thus behaves like one.

Word Quiz (b) lion

HOTS Question The narrator calls the baby silly and childish, but he surely loves his baby sister and does not mean what he says about her. The narrator himself is not old enough to understand that the baby is behaving the way she should. She is too young to understand the lessons of 'a b c' and finds small tricks and acts fun and exciting. So, the narrator thinks that she is silly and childish. But at the same time, he loves her as he likes spending time with her. He tries to have fun with her in different ways. To show my love towards my younger siblings, I too would spend time with them and engage them in activities that would be fun and exciting. I would love to watch their silly and childish acts. Like the narrator, I too would get annoyed at times. I would also take care of them when my parents are not around.

It was a bright and sunny morning. Rohan and Shalini were ready to go to school. As their school was nearby, they would often walk to their school. Soon, they bid goodbye to their parents and set on their way. They were joyously marching on their way when Shalini's eyes fell on a purse that was lying on the pavement. She went to pick it up and showed it to Rohan. Together, they decided that if they found out the owner of the purse, they would return it to him with all its content inside. Rohan was hesitant to look into someone else's purse but he knew that it was for a good cause. He looked through it and found a visiting card. Fortunately, the address on the card was not far away from the school. They had enough time to return the purse to its rightful owner and then come back to school. With this thought in their mind, they started for their destination. They finally found the man who had lost his purse the other day. He thanked them for their thoughtful gesture and said that he was happy to see someone who could go out of their way to help someone. With a smile on their faces, the children rushed to reach the school on time. The man also went to the school with them and told the school Principal about their act of kindness. The Principal was very happy and he rewarded Rohan and Shalini for their honesty
